ABSTRACT

Information about salaries of higher education administrators in the West in 1978-79 is presented. The data came from an annual survey of administrative salaries conducted by the College and University Personnel Association. The 216 institutions from the West, which were part of the national data base, are described by state, type, and source of support. Among the findings are the following: although median salaries of administrators in the West are generally higher than salaries nationally, the differences are small: administrators in public institutions generally receive higher salaries than their counterparts in private institutions: salaries at private institutions in the West are generally lower than median salaries nationwide: median salaries at public institutions are higher at four-year than at two-year colleges and higher at universities than at four-year colleges: and salaries for most positions in the western states of California, Hawaii, Nevada, and Guam tend to be higher than in the northwestern states of Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. Salary levels are reported at the median, first quartile, and third quartile. Salary data for the nation and descriptions of positions are included. (SW)

Preface

This report provides information about salaries of higher education administrators in the West. While several sources report faculty salaries, there is no published source of western regional data on administrative salaries. The College and University Personnel Association (CUPA), which provided the data in this report, publishes only a national study with very limited attention to regional data. Further, this report groups salary data somewhat differently than the CUPA report, by public and private institutions and for institutions of different sizes and levels. The data here are for the 1978-79 academic year. This report will be updated in the fall of 1980 when new data are available.

This report is the first of a series published by WICHE's Information Clearinghouse in an effort to provide useful information for higher education administrators, governing boards, coordinating boards, legislatures, and executive agencies. We urge the reader to comment on this report; an evaluation form can be found at the conclusion.

This report was prepared by Dennis Viehland, Norman Kaufman, and Barbara Krauth for the Information Clearinghouse. We wish to express our appreciation to Cherie Pedersen and Dot Read for piecing together and typing numerous drafts of the report. Please address any comments or questions to: Norman Kaufman or Dennis Viehland, WICHE, P.O. Drawer P, Boulder, CO 80302; telephone (303) 497-0221 or 497-0223.

Highlights

- Although median salaries of administrators in the West are generally higher than salaries nationally, the differences are small (tables 1 and 2).
- Administrators in public institutions generally receive higher salaries than their counterparts in private institutions. This is true in the West and in the nation as a whole (table 1).
- Salaries at private institutions in the West are generally lower than median salaries nationwide (tables 1 and 2).
- Median salaries at public institutions are higher at four-year than at two-year colleges and higher at universities than at four-year colleges (table 4).
- As the size of the institution increases, median administrative salaries also increase (table 5).
- Breakdowns into subregional groups are important in interstate comparisons. For example, salaries for most positions in the "western states" (California, Hawaii, Nevada, and Guam) tend to be higher than in the "northwestern states" (Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming) (table 6).

The Survey

This report presents 1978-79 data on administrative salaries in higher education. The data are taken from an annual survey of administrative salaries conducted by the College and University Personnel Association (CUPA). National data on administrative salaries are taken with permission from the CUPA publication, 1978-79 Administrative Compensation Survey, published in March 1979. Administrative salary data for the West were supplied to WICHE by CUPA via a special computer program.

In fall 1978 CUPA sent its survey instrument to 3,173¹ postsecondary institutions in the United States. It received 1,328 usable responses (a 42 percent response rate), which became the national data base. The data collected by the survey met the following specifications:

- Salaries were those in effect during the fall of 1978.
- Salaries were annualized for full-time service, reflecting only actual cash earnings, excluding any services contributed without charge.
- Enrollment ranges used in the report were for the academic year 1978-79 and are stated in terms of equivalent full-time students.

A copy of the complete survey instrument can be found on pages 114-131 of the 1978-79 Administrative Compensation Survey. The administrative position descriptions used by CUPA are in Appendix C of this report. The user should be aware of the limitations inherent in any form of survey research, which qualify the data that are presented. These include:

- The response rate--the western response rate to the survey was 42 percent (46 percent for the public institutions, 35 percent for the private institutions). In addition, the response rate varied greatly from state to state.
- Other factors--there is, of course, no control for variables such as length of time in office or job performance, which are major factors in establishing salary levels.

¹Much of the data in this section are taken from: College and University Personnel Association, 1978-79 Administrative Compensation Survey. Washington, D.C.: CUPA, 1979.

- No information is available on staff benefits. It is essential to consider these benefits in examining the broader question of administrative compensation.
- No trend data are presented. Salary data are presented for one year only. No analysis of change over time could be presented in this report, but this problem will be eliminated in future years as WICHE obtains salary reports on an annual basis.
- Institutional reporting of salary levels varies for each position. In some instances, data were derived from as few as five institutions. The number of cases reported is noted.

The special computer run provided to WICHE compiled data on salary levels for various types of institutions in the thirteen western states that comprise the WICHE Compact. Two-hundred-sixteen institutions from the West were included in the national data base. A summary of these institutions by state, type, and source of support follows.

The Institutions

Table A describes the institutions that responded to the CUPA survey. Details for both the national and western data bases are shown. Higher education in the West is slightly weighted in the direction of the public sector and toward the two-year college segment, and this is reflected in the data. A breakdown of the western salary data base by state is shown in table B on the following page.

The Data

Tables 1-6 show median salary levels for fifteen common administrative positions. The report uses median salary because unlike the mean, a median, which is the middle case in a list, is not affected by extremely high or low salaries. Thus, half of the salaries are below the median and half of the salaries are above. This is especially important when the number of cases is small--an extremely high salary in a list of five will create a high mean salary.

The fifteen administrative positions were selected on the basis of their commonality to most colleges and universities. The term "cases" used in some tables refers to the number of institutions in the category that reported salary data.

The Tables

Tables 1-6 were condensed from the complete tables found in the appendices. Appendix A, including tables 7-18, shows the salary levels for administrative positions in colleges and universities in the West.

The appendix tables report salary levels at the median, first quartile, and third quartile. In the same way that the median divides the total list in half, the quartiles divide the two segments in half. Thus, 25 percent of the salaries fall below the first quartile, 50 percent of the salaries fall below the median and 75 percent of the salaries fall below the third quartile (or 25 percent of the salaries occur above the third quartile). The salaries between the first and third quartile compose the interquartile range. This is a valuable measure because it determines a range within which half of the salaries (the middle 50 percent) fall.

Appendix B (tables 19-27) contains salary data for the nation. (Although tables 25-27 are tables for the subregions within the West, the data are derived from CUPA's national data base and thus are listed here.) Tables 19-21 and 25-27 present salary information, while tables 22-24 contain a calculation of administrative salaries as a percentage of the chief executive officer's salary. These tables were taken from CUPA's 1978-79 Administrative Compensation Survey. The following matrix indicates the correspondence between summary tables and complete tables for the West and the nation.
